

31272 Project Management and the Professional

Individual reflections Spring 2025

Overview

This is an individual assignment.

- Using the provided template, show how the previous assignments have contributed to your understanding of project management and working with groups.
- Mere documentation of what you might find on “the web”, in the lecture notes or from talking to other students or the use of generative AI will attract VERY LOW marks.

Aim

Reviewing and reflecting on completed projects is a useful practice for project managers. You are creating a review of the subject. You are expected to reflect and report on what and how things worked out (or didn't work out) with regard to the plan you prepared in the first part and with what you prepared in the team charter and the project health check. What lessons have been learnt and what you might do differently on your next project.

Task and Deliverables

This assignment is due in the final assessment period, following the completion and submission of all subject activities and other assessments. It is designed to reflect on the complete subject and therefore should be written after the subject work is complete. Given the benefit of hindsight, we would like to know what you have learnt. What could you have done differently? What do you suggest that we do differently?

A template is provided for this assessment.

Important Notes:

You are expected to follow the University policy and guidelines regarding plagiarism.

Late submissions of assignments will incur a penalty as explained in the subject outline.

An extension in the time of submission will only be granted under exceptional circumstances by the subject coordinator. In all cases, supporting evidence must be provided for the request to be considered and the request should be received by the subject coordinator BEFORE the assignment is due. The subject coordinator reserves the right to apply a late penalty as explained in the subject outline.
